Holyrood Parliamentary Motion

S4M-03411 Christina McKelvie: EU Strategy toward the Eradication of Trafficking in Human Beings—That the Parliament welcomes the publication by the European Commission of The EU Strategy towards the Eradication of Trafficking in Human Beings 2012–2016; notes that the strategy sets out 40 specific measures to tackle human trafficking on an EU-wide basis, including the provision of clear information to victims on people's rights under EU law and national legislation, in particular the right to assistance, healthcare and residency; agrees with the Commissioner for Home Affairs, Cecilia Malmström, that the EU must aim to eradicate trafficking; understands that the strategy will now go to the European Parliament and Council for discussion; hopes that MEPs will give it their full backing, and urges the administrations of all of the member states, including the UK, to play a full and constructive role in cross-European anti-trafficking work and to adopt this strategy as part of their own national efforts against human trafficking.

Westminster Parliamentary Questions

Entry Clearances: Internet

Jim Shannon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the UK Border Agency plans to update all relevant applications online to ensure that they are not out of date and invalid. [112218]

Reply from Damian Green: The UK Border Agency seeks to ensure all application forms available on its website are up-to-date, with clearly labelled validity dates. The UK Border Agency does recognise that some applicants may download forms some time before completing and submitting them. For a period of three weeks after any changes come into effect, the UK Border Agency accepts applications on the old form.

The UK Border Agency plans to modernise the application process which will remove the need for customers to print off an application form and complete it. Current plans indicate that this modernisation will be complete by 2015.

Immigration Controls

Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans her Department has to raise the minimum income requirements for immigration sponsors. [111814]

Reply from Damian Green: The Home Secretary announced on 11 June 2012 that the Government will set a minimum income threshold of £18,600 for sponsoring a non-EEA spouse or partner to settle in the UK. There will be a higher threshold for each child sponsored: a £22,400 threshold for a partner with one child, with an additional £2,400 for each further child. The new financial requirement will be introduced on 9 July 2012. Full details are in the Statement of Intent, a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate her Department has made of the change in immigration levels arising from an increase in the minimum income requirements for immigration sponsors. [111815]

Reply from Damian Green: The introduction of the new financial requirement is expected to lead to a reduction in family route visa grants of 13,600 to 17,800 per annum. A full impact assessment of the changes to the family route will be published shortly.

Immigrants: Domestic Violence

John Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence the UK Border Agency requires to accept a claim for leave to remain as a victim of domestic violence. [111372]

Reply from Damian Green: In order for a claim for indefinite leave to remain as a victim of domestic violence to be considered under part 8 paragraph 289A of the Immigration Rules, the applicant must have been granted entry clearance or leave to remain as a partner in a genuine and subsisting relationship, be in the UK and provide evidence that their relationship was caused to permanently break down before that leave expired as a result of domestic violence.

Evidence to prove domestic violence has taken place can include court orders, criminal convictions, police cautions and formal documentary evidence such as a letter from Chair of a multi-agency risk assessment conference (MARAC).

Where formal documentation is not available, other types of evidence such as a medical report from a doctor or hospital, police incident report(s), letter(s) from social service departments and written report(s) from a domestic violence support organisation are accepted in support of a claim.

<http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm201213/cmhansrd/cm120618/text/120618w0002.htm#12061851000033>

Immigration: Detention

Lord Avebury: To ask Her Majesty's Government whether they will revise the UK Border Agency's Enforcement Instructions and Guidance to ensure that decisions to initiate and maintain detention include an assessment of the likelihood of deportation being carried out within a period of detention that is lawful and reasonable.[HL631]

Reply from the Minister of State, Home Office (Lord Henley): Chapter 55 of the UK Border Agency's Enforcement Instructions and Guidance already makes clear that detention may only continue for a period that is reasonable in all the circumstances for the specific purpose for which it was authorised. The guidance also makes clear that, if before the expiry of the reasonable period it becomes apparent that the purpose of the power, for example removal or deportation, cannot be effected within that reasonable period, the power to detain should not be exercised. Furthermore, the guidance confirms that detention can only lawfully be exercised where there is a realistic prospect of removal or deportation within a reasonable period.

In cases involving foreign national offenders, due to the need to protect the public, where the deportation criteria are met, the normal presumption in favour of temporary admission or temporary release, rather than detention, should be weighed against the risk of the individual reoffending or absconding. If detention is considered appropriate, this is subject to the proviso that there is the prospect of removal within a reasonable timescale.

Immigration

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many legacy cases have been (a) processed and (b) were outstanding in each month since their transfer to the Case Assurance and Audit Unit. [112325]

Reply from Damian Green: The information requested is not held on a month by month basis, however as reported to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 3 May 2012 the Case Assurance and Audit Unit has resolved 12,600 asylum legacy cases since their transfer from Case Resolution Directorate.

As reported, at the end of March 2012, there were 80,000 cases in the asylum controlled archive and 21,000 live cases.

Gemma Doyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were refused entry to the UK at the UK border on (a) 10 May 2011 and (b) 10 May 2012. [112536]

Reply from Damian Green: The Home Office does not publish data on how many people were refused entry to the UK on particular dates.

For Quarter 2 (April to June 2011) there were 4,237 refusals. The statistics for Quarter 2 of 2012 are planned to be published in August 2012, and will be available on the Home Office website: www.homeoffice.gov.uk

Previous quarterly statistics can also be found here.

Immigration

Gemma Doyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were detained for further questioning by the UK Border Agency at UK borders on 10 May (a) 2011 and (b) 2012. [112550]

Reply from Damian Green: The data requested is not published by the Home Office. However, data on the number of those who are refused entry is published quarterly.

For Quarter 2 (April to June 2011) there were 4,237 refusals. The statistics for Quarter 2 of 2012 are planned to be published in August 2012. These can be accessed via the following link: <http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk>

Justin Tomlinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department of the UK Border Agency applications that were refused a right to remain, what proportion her Department estimates left the UK in the last year for which figures are available. [112591]

Reply from Damian Green: The Home Office publishes immigration statistics on a quarterly and annual basis, copies of which can be found in the Library of the House. The latest published statistics on asylum and non-asylum removals can also be found at:

<http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/publications/science-research-statistics/research-statistics/immigration-asylum-research/immigration-q1-2012/>

The data requested is not held in a format compatible with National Statistics protocols, or produced as part of the UK Border Agency's standard reports.

Asylum

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will consider granting temporary immigration status to refused asylum seekers who are unable to return to their home countries. [111346]

Reply from Damian Green: Every asylum claim is carefully considered on its individual merits against the UK's obligations under the Refugee Convention and European Convention on Human Rights. Every applicant whose fundamental human rights would be contravened by returning to their home country is granted appropriate status in the UK. Those who do not qualify are expected to make every effort to return to their country of origin. Where there is a legitimate temporary barrier to return, support is available in cases where the individual would otherwise be destitute until return is possible.

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will consider granting temporary immigration status to refused asylum seekers who are effectively stateless because their country of origin will not accept them and, as a result, they are unable to claim Section 4 support. [111347]

Reply from Damian Green: Asylum seekers who do not qualify for status are expected to return to their country of origin unless there is a legitimate temporary barrier to return, in which case support will be provided until return is possible if the individual would otherwise be destitute.

<http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm201213/cmhansrd/cm120618/text/120618w0002.htm#12061851000029>

Asylum

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support she is providing to refused asylum seekers who are unable to return to their home countries which (a) are and (b) are not countries to which the UK is not carrying out removals. [111376]

Reply from Damian Green: All failed asylum seekers can apply for support under Section 4(2) of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. In order to be granted support they need to show that they are destitute and can satisfy one or more of the conditions set out in regulation 3(2) of the Immigration and Asylum (Provision of Accommodation to Failed Asylum-Seekers) Regulations 2005.

Section 4 support consists of accommodation and a weekly allowance to cover essential living needs.

Mr Buckland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK Border Agency legacy cases there are. [111612]

Reply from Damian Green: As reported by the UK Border Agency chief executive in his letter to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 22 May 2012, the number of legacy cases are: Live asylum cohort 21,000, Asylum Controlled archive 80,000, Migration Controlled Archive 21,500.

Andrea Leadsom: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers were transferred from the UK to each other EU member state in each year from 1994 to 2002. [112459]

	Asylum seekers transferred from the UK to other EU member states ⁽²⁾
1997	⁽¹⁾ 103
1998	849
1999	838
2000	703
2001	600
2002	1,060

⁽¹⁾ Figures are only available from the date the Dublin Convention was ratified on 1 September 1997. ⁽²⁾ The figures are based on management information data that is not quality assured under National Statistics protocols. The figures do not constitute part of National Statistics and should be treated as provisional. Figures for 2011 are not currently available, nor has it been possible within the time frame to provide a breakdown by member state.

Paul Blomfield: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed Sudanese asylum seekers were removed from the UK to (a) Sudan and (b) South Sudan in (i) 2010-11 and (ii) 2011-12. [112521]

Reply from Damian Green: The following table shows the total number of Sudanese asylum cases removed or voluntarily departed to Sudan and South Sudan from the UK in 2010-11 and 2011-12.

Been established left without informing the immigration authorities. ⁽²⁾ Figures include dependants. ⁽³⁾ Removals and voluntary departures recorded on the system as at the dates on which the data extracts were taken. ⁽⁴⁾ Destination as recorded on source database. ⁽⁵⁾ Provisional figures. Figures will under record due to data cleansing and data matching exercises that take place after the extracts are taken.

It is not possible within these figures to say what stage in the asylum process these people have reached at the time of their removal, including whether their claim has failed at that point, because those departing voluntarily can do so at any stage without necessarily notifying the UK Border Agency.

The Home Office publishes quarterly and annual statistics on the number of persons removed or departed voluntarily from the UK within 'Immigration Statistics'. The data on removals and voluntary departures by country of nationality and destination are available in the latest release, Immigration Statistics: January to March 2012, tables rv.05 and rv.05.q, from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Science, research and statistics web pages at:

Andrea Leadsom: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers were transferred to the UK from other EU member states in each of the years from 1994 to 2002. [112576]

Asylum

robert Buckland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK Border Agency legacy cases were completed in each of the last five years. [111613]

Reply from Damian Green: As reported to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 3 May 2012, the Case Assurance and Audit Unit concluded the asylum legacy cases of 12,600 people in the preceding 12 months.

Prior to April 2011 legacy asylum cases were concluded by the Case Resolution Directorate. Annual conclusion figures are not recorded.

Asylum Seekers

Baroness Lister of Burtersett: To ask Her Majesty's Government how many individuals, including dependants, were in receipt of Section 95 asylum support in each of the past five years, broken down by age.[HL698]

Reply from the Minister of State, Home Office (Lord Henley): The following table shows the number of asylum seekers in receipt of Section 95 support. Information broken down by age is not available.

Asylum seekers in receipt of Section 95 support, as at end of year
2007	43,052

and Asylum Act 1999 to destitute asylum seekers until their asylum claim is finally determined.

Section 95 support can be provided as both accommodation and subsistence, or accommodation or subsistence only. Data from 2010 onwards are provisional figures.

The data include dependants in receipt of support.

The data excludes unaccompanied asylum seeking children supported by local authorities.

The number of asylum seekers granted Section 95 support is published on a quarterly basis and can be found in Table as.17q, available in Asylum Excel Tables Volume five. Immigration: Detention

Lord Lester of Herne Hill: To ask Her Majesty's Government, further to the Written Answer by Lord Henley on 11 June (WA 196), why the UK Border Agency does not maintain records of the number of cases where their decision to detain has been upheld or overturned; how they currently monitor whether they comply with the law; and whether they will maintain such records in future.[HL754]

Border Agency does hold records pertaining to detention of individuals, it is not able to extract statistical information which accurately meets the specific nature of the original request from the noble Lord. To do so would require scrutinising each individual case. There are no plans currently to hold such records.

The UK Border Agency has clear guidelines for operational staff regarding detention of individuals to ensure all actions are compliant with the law. Each detention has clear monitoring procedures and has to be reviewed at different dates to ensure it remains justified.

Immigration: Deportation

Lord Eames: To ask Her Majesty's Government what assessment they have made of the standard of care afforded to the children of persons awaiting deportation from the United Kingdom.[HL740]

Reply from the Minister of State, Home Office (Lord Henley): The UK Border Agency has developed a new approach for managing the return of families in response to the Government's commitment to end the detention of children for immigration purposes. The aim is to encourage families to leave without the need for enforcement action when they have no right to remain in the UK and for children to remain with their families in the community wherever possible. Where children stay in UK Border Agency facilities, it is now only for very short periods immediately prior to removal, in either Cedars pre-departure accommodation (where welfare services are provided by Barnardo's), or (in the case of families stopped at the border and a small number of high-risk or criminal cases) Tinsley House Immigration Removal Centre. Both facilities have been specifically developed with the needs of families and children in mind and are subject to regular inspection by the appropriate statutory bodies.

Lord Lester of Herne Hill: To ask Her Majesty's Government by what process, notwithstanding the United Kingdom's obligations under the Geneva Convention relating to the status of refugees, the UK Border Agency deported Tamils to Sri Lanka who were subsequently awarded asylum in the United Kingdom, following ill-treatment in Sri Lanka; and what steps they are taking to avoid a similar situation occurring in future.[HL775]

Reply from Lord Henley: It is government policy not to comment on specific cases. Every asylum claim made in the UK is carefully considered against our obligations under the refugee convention and the European Convention on Human Rights. In reaching a decision on an application, anxious scrutiny is given to the facts of the case, including the situation in the claimant's home country. The UK Border Agency's returns policy is kept constantly under review and decisions are taken in the light of prevailing circumstances. Returns are only enforced when it is safe to do so and when the agency and the courts are satisfied that the individual has no international protection needs.

Deportation

Alun Cairns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 15 May 2012, Official Report, column 63W, on deportation, how many immigrants the UK Border Agency deported in each of the last five years; to which countries; and using what form and class of travel. [111101]

Reply from Damian Green: Deportations are a specific subset of removals which are enforced either following a criminal conviction or when it is judged that a person's removal from the UK is conducive to the public good. The deportation order prohibits the person returning to the UK until such time as it may be revoked. Most illegal immigrants are removed under administrative or illegal entry powers from the UK rather than being deported.

It has therefore been assumed that the question refers to the number of enforced removals and voluntary departures from the UK as opposed to the number of deportations.

The table placed in the House Library, shows the total number of removals and voluntary departures by country of destination in each year from 2007 to 2011.

The Home Office publishes quarterly and annual statistics on the number of persons removed or departed voluntarily from the UK within Immigration Statistics. The data on removals and voluntary departures by country of destination is available in the latest release, Immigration Statistics: January-March 2012, tables rv.06 and rv.06.q, from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Science, research and statistics web pages at:

<http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/science-research/research-statistics/migration/migration-statistics1/>

The UK Border Agency seeks to achieve the best value for money when returning nationals with no right to remain in the UK. Ticket costs and a number of other factors are taken into account when deciding on the method and route of return. It is not possible to provide an accurate breakdown of the form and class of travel without examination of individual records at disproportionate cost.

<http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm201213/cmhansrd/cm120621/text/120621w0002.htm#12062169000015>

Human Trafficking

Peter Bone: What steps schools are taking to raise awareness of the effect of human trafficking. [111836]

Reply from the Minister for Further Education, Skills and Lifelong Learning

(Mr John Hayes): Human trafficking is an outrage. William Wilberforce spoke of “this bloody traffic, of which our posterity, looking back...will scarce believe that it has been suffered to exist so long a disgrace and dishonour to this country.”

We must be in our age as determined as he was in his to end the pain of this wicked trade in human lives.

Peter Bone: The Minister and the Prime Minister have shown their commitment to fighting human trafficking, but the dreadful case that was recently reported of internal trafficking within the United Kingdom shows the necessity of our schools highlighting this evil crime. Will the Minister meet me, other members of the all-party group on human trafficking and Anthony Steen to discuss how we can take the matter forward?

Reply from John Hayes: Yes, of course I will. My hon. Friend is absolutely right that schools have a vital role to play, which was why we issued new guidelines to that end. He will also know that since he last asked me about this matter—he is a doughty champion of the victims of this dreadful trade—I have, as he asked, written to charities to engage them in the process.

Paul Goggins: In line with the recommendations in today's report on children who go missing from care, will the Minister please discuss with his colleagues in the Home Office the importance of keeping on the police national database the details of all trafficked children who go missing, so that they are not forgotten and so that if, for example, they turn up in a cannabis factory, they can be treated immediately as victims rather than criminals?

Reply from John Hayes: The right hon. Gentleman is quite right to draw attention to that excellent report, which I was able to read this morning. He is right that coordinated action by local authorities, the Home Office and the Department for Education is vital, and we will indeed go about that business in the fashion and spirit that he describes.

Jane Ellison: On the subject of raising awareness of crime in schools, some primary-age girls are at particular risk of being taken abroad in the long summer holidays to suffer female genital mutilation. Will the Minister take this opportunity to emphasise the safeguarding responsibilities of schools in that regard?

Reply from John Hayes: Yes, indeed. I had a meeting with my officials and discussed just that matter. It is, as my hon. Friend will know—because she has also been a champion of these matters—something that happens across the year in different volumes. There are peak periods for this, and we need to take action to take account of that and to use all agencies to offer the right kind of advice in those areas that are most vulnerable and to those young people who are most vulnerable.

Lisa Nandy: In the response to today's report on children in care, Ministers made no mention of the 60% of trafficked children who routinely go missing. Will he respond to widespread concerns surrounding the move of the Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre into the National Crime Agency, described by CEOP's former head as about saving face, not saving children, and ensure that child safeguarding is made an explicit strategic priority for the NCA so that the focus on these children is not lost?

Reply from John Hayes: The Secretary of State and the Under-Secretary of State for Education, the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Tim Loughton), who has responsibility for children, are having a meeting this afternoon on just those matters, to ensure that our response is co-ordinated in the way the hon. Lady describes. It is fair to say that there is an issue about the different claims about the number of children who go missing and the need for a more consistent approach to how those records are maintained. I hear what she says and it will no doubt help to inform the discussions that will take place this afternoon—because we do not hesitate on these matters—between the Secretary of State and the Under-Secretary.

Diplomatic Service: Human Trafficking

Peter Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the role played by the UK's overseas missions in tackling the problem of human trafficking. [112517]

Reply from Jeremy Browne: Our embassies and high commissions provide a platform for departments including the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA), the Department for International Development (DFID) and the UK Border Agency (UKBA) to implement the Government's Human Trafficking Strategy overseas. Work is primarily focused on the nine top source countries for potentially trafficked victims in the UK and some work is carried out in transit countries.

Our embassies and high commissions make a valuable contribution to tackling human trafficking including through:

working with foreign governments and other organisations to build their capacity to disrupt human trafficking, for example by working with investigators and prosecutors to increase prosecutions for human trafficking offences;

addressing the root causes of human trafficking through DFID's work to alleviate poverty overseas, for example the four-year DFID-led South Asia Project covering India, Nepal and Bangladesh which aims to reduce the number of women and girls from being trafficked and to protect the rights of women and girls who migrate for work from Asia;

encouraging governments in source and transit countries to take the lead to protect potential victims and reintegrate victims; and contributing to the UK's and international efforts to combat trafficking by ensuring that UK interests are effectively represented bilaterally and in multilateral fora, including the EU and the UN.

Human Trafficking: Convictions

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many convictions there were for offences related to human trafficking in 2011. [112431]

Reply from Crispin Blunt: The number of defendants found guilty at all courts in England and Wales in 2011 for human trafficking offences, on a principal offence basis, is eight.

Westminster Parliamentary Questions

Apprenticeships: Ethnic Minorities

Baroness Hussein-Ece: To ask Her Majesty's Government how many people from an ethnic-minority background aged 16 to 24 are undertaking apprenticeships.

Reply from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (Baroness Wilcox): My Lords, final data for the 2010-11 academic year show that 8.7%-that is, 23,890-of new apprenticeships aged under 25 were from an ethnic minority background. This figure has increased from 7.2% in 2009-10.

Baroness Hussein-Ece: I thank my noble friend for that reply. However, she will be aware that over 55% of black men aged between 18 and 24 are currently unemployed, a figure which has nearly doubled since 2008; that ethnic minorities are underrepresented in the Government's apprenticeship schemes in the more prestigious industries such as construction and engineering; and that those who do manage to get on an apprenticeship scheme are less likely to progress to a related job. So although I welcome the review they are undertaking, will the Government address in this review and monitor the number of ethnic minorities-as well as women and people with disabilities-who are taking up these apprenticeships in order to ensure equal access?

Reply from Baroness Wilcox: I agree with my noble friend that there is scope to ensure that apprenticeships better support learners from a wide range of backgrounds. I am aware of her interest and her expertise in this area and her excellent work for the Equality and Human Rights Commission. My colleagues in the other place and I are very keen that the apprenticeships programme should be genuinely accessible to all. I do not have time to go into it all now, but I would welcome the opportunity to meet with my noble friend to discuss any more thoughts she may have that we can take forward.

Baroness Whitaker: Does the Minister know how many Gypsy, Roma and Traveller young people have been offered apprenticeships, and if not could she please find out?

Reply from Baroness Wilcox: I heard the question as being about Travellers. I do not have any information on that here with me now but I would be only too delighted to talk to the noble Baroness. We have seen an awful lot of programmes on the television recently about weddings and Travellers et cetera, and I think that we have all become much more familiar with the life they lead and the difficulties associated with that roaming lifestyle. I would be only too delighted to come back with the information, not only for the noble Baroness but for myself.

Schools: Gypsy, Roma and Travellers

Lord Avebury: To ask Her Majesty's Government, in the light of the inclusion of Gypsy, Roma and Traveller pupils within the Ofsted evaluation schedule for the inspection of maintained schools and academies as a specific group of vulnerable children, how they will ensure that Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools and registered inspectors are sufficiently well trained to be able to make informed judgements about the quality of policy, provision and practice in relation these pupils.[HL630]

Reply from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Schools (Lord Hill of Oareford): This question is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Sir Michael Wilshaw, has written to the noble Lord, and a copy of his response has been placed in the House Libraries.

Letter from Sir Michael Wilshaw, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, Ofsted, to Lord Avebury, dated 13 June 2012.

Parliamentary Question Number HL630: To ask Her Majesty's Government, in the light of the inclusion of Gypsy, Roma and Traveller pupils within the Ofsted evaluation schedule for the inspection of maintained schools and academies as a specific group of vulnerable children, how they will ensure that Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools and registered inspectors are sufficiently well trained to be able to make informed judgments about the quality of policy, provision and practice in relation these pupils.

Your recent Parliamentary Question has been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for response.

Her Majesty's Inspectors (HMI) and additional inspectors employed by Ofsted's contracted inspection service providers undergo rigorous initial training and are subject periodically to further training-particularly when a new inspection framework is introduced.

Inspectors were trained fully to implement the current framework, which was introduced in January 2012, and will be trained to apply the amended framework in advance of its implementation in September 2012. This training focuses on the importance of schools and teachers meeting the individual needs of each pupil.

One of the key principles underpinning the current inspection framework and the September 2012 amended framework is that inspection should focus on "narrowing the gap". Inspectors investigate how well the school is enabling pupils from underachieving groups nationally to bridge the gap between their achievement and the achievement of all pupils nationally. The inspection framework is clear that where particular groups of pupils are not learning and making progress that is at least in line with all pupils nationally then this should be investigated fully. This approach applies to Gypsy, Roma and Traveller pupils in the same way as it does to other groups of pupils who may be vulnerable to underachievement. In addition, lead inspectors are able to focus on groups and individuals, including Gypsy, Roma and Traveller pupils, through detailed case studies in order to test the quality of the school's provision for those pupils.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Lord Hill of Oareford, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Schools, and will be placed in the Library of both Houses.

Racism and Religious Hatred

Holyrood Parliamentary Questions

Racist Hate Crime

John Park: To ask the Scottish Executive what steps it is taking to tackle racist hate crime. (S4O-01153)

Reply from the Minister for Community Safety and Legal Affairs (Roseanna Cunningham): All hate crimes are deplorable and have no place in modern Scotland.

Earlier this month, we cautiously welcomed newly published figures that show a decrease in racist incidents recorded by the police in Scotland for 2010-11. Although those figures showed a decrease in racist incidents, there is absolutely no room for complacency and the Scottish Government is committed to tackling all types of hate crime and supports all efforts to stamp it out.

That is why we are providing nearly £9 million in funding during the period 2012 to 2015 to organisations whose work is aimed at tackling racist attitudes and improving the lives of minority ethnic communities, including refugees, asylum seekers, migrant workers and Gypsy Travellers. That includes £2.9 million to strategic partners such as the Council of Ethnic Minority Voluntary Sector Organisations, Black and Ethnic Minority Infrastructure in Scotland and the Scottish Refugee Council to deliver race equality at a national level and represent the views of minority ethnic groups and individuals in Scotland. We also provided funding of £5.9 million to organisations to deliver projects working towards race equality at a grass-roots level.

Even one racist hate crime is one too many and we continue to work with those organisations to create the one Scotland to which we all aspire.

John Park: The minister might be aware of the report in the Dundee Courier on 13 June of a 50 per cent increase in race hate crime in Fife. Obviously, that is concerning. It has been suggested in reports in the newspaper that Fife Constabulary is recording those crimes differently now, which might account for the spike. Will the minister look into the spike in Fife and consider publishing some figures from Fife in the next three to six months, which will help us to see whether the issue is simply down to reporting methods or whether something more sinister underlies the figures?

Reply from Roseanna Cunningham: It is often the case that there are variations in the national figures. Sometimes, that is to do with issues such as changes in recording methods or the fact that there has been a specific focus on a particular crime. The member is quite right to flag up the differential between Fife and other parts of Scotland. I undertake to have a closer look at the matter to try to establish the underlying causes and determine whether the issue is simply a technical one or whether a problem is developing in Fife. I will meet the member in the near future, if he wishes.

Malcolm Chisholm: The minister will not wish to comment on the decisions that courts have made or may make on this matter, but will she, in general terms, applaud the decision that was taken by the City of Edinburgh Council—and, I believe, Dundee City Council—not to allow marches by the so-called Scottish defence league? Does she agree that there is no place in Scotland for the Scottish defence league's message of hate against ethnic minority communities in general and the Muslim community in particular? [Applause.]

Reply from Roseanna Cunningham: The applause perhaps gives the member the answer that he might expect. I suspect that every member in the chamber is united in their abhorrence of the message that is being promulgated in Scotland by what is a small group of individuals who insist on making arguments that the rest of us simply do not and never will agree with. I commend those councils that are taking active steps to prevent that message from being broadcast even more loudly on the streets of Scotland's cities.

Sectarianism

Christina McKelvie: To ask the Scottish Government what action it is taking to educate children and young people about the dangers of sectarianism. (S4O-01156)

Reply from the Minister for Community Safety and Legal Affairs (Roseanna Cunningham): The curriculum for excellence provides the right environment to enable our young people to develop as informed and responsible citizens, and education remains central to the Scottish Government's approach to tackling sectarianism. I am therefore delighted that Education Scotland will highlight its work to combat sectarianism at this year's Scottish learning festival, which will showcase best practice in the area. That best practice includes a range of projects that are currently funded by the Scottish Government and which use many approaches, such as the arts, sports and classroom-based learning, to deliver real outcomes for our young people.

Christina McKelvie: Will the minister join me in congratulating the Larkhall community on being awarded the first Nil by Mouth communities award, which was granted for the positive work that has been undertaken by the community, the churches and the Machan Trust to tackle sectarianism? I convey an invitation to the minister to see the great work that the Machan Trust in Larkhall does in tackling the scourge of sectarianism in its community.

Reply from Roseanna Cunningham: I am delighted to join my colleague Christina McKelvie in applauding the creativity of the Machan Trust and staff and pupils on the initiative. That initiative is an example of the great work that is happening in Larkhall and the surrounding area, and is one of the reasons why Larkhall has become the first area in Scotland to receive the Nil by Mouth award, which recognises several years of hard work in uniting people of different religious and cultural backgrounds.

I have visited a variety of schools in the past few months, and would be delighted to visit the member's constituency, meet those who are involved in that excellent project and see first hand some of the other exciting initiatives that are taking place across Larkhall and the surrounding area. There are, of course, such initiatives in other parts of Scotland, too. An enormous amount of very good work is being done in Scotland right now on sectarianism, and I commend everybody who is involved in it, but I particularly commend Larkhall for being the first to get champion for change accreditation status.

Westminster Parliamentary Questions

Castes

Richard Fuller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent consideration she has given to using the powers in section 9(5)(a) of the Equality Act 2010 to make caste an aspect of race for purposes of the Act. [112761]

Reply from Lynne Featherstone: Our consideration of this matter is still ongoing. This is a sensitive issue; any consideration of how best to proceed must balance the perceived need for legislative intervention against this Government's emphasis on challenging red tape and avoidance of additional regulation which may put an unnecessary burden on employers and other businesses.

Richard Fuller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations she has received on making caste an aspect of race under the Equality Act 2010. [112762]

Ministerial Statement

Charitable Giving

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Miss Chloe Smith): The Government have today introduced the Small Charitable Donations Bill into Parliament. This will enable charities to claim gift aid-style payments on the small cash donations that they receive. Charities and community amateur sports clubs (CASCs) can find it difficult to claim gift aid on donations collected in certain circumstances, for example bucket collections, where donors may be reluctant to stop and fill out gift aid declarations. This means that charities are currently missing out on potential income.

This new scheme will allow charities and CASCs to claim top-up payments of 25p for every £1 collected on small cash donations of £20 or less, up to a total of £5,000 of donations per year. The scheme is designed to allow top-up payments to charities on the donations for which they cannot easily get a gift aid declaration. It will supplement the main gift aid scheme, which provides over £1 billion a year in additional income for the charitable sector.

In developing the scheme, the Government have taken steps to ensure that it operates as fairly as possible, whilst keeping overall costs of the scheme affordable and also protecting against fraud. The scheme has been designed in order to make it fair and generous, and straightforward for charities to claim the top-up payments. HM Revenue and Customs will be issuing guidance for charities ahead of the scheme commencing.
